

Development opportunities

University of Queensland (UQ) provides a range of development opportunities for its staff, including professional development, leadership training, and career coaching. These opportunities are designed to support staff in their current roles and prepare them for future challenges. UQ also offers a variety of learning and development programs, including online courses, workshops, and seminars. Staff can access these programs through the UQ Learning and Development portal.

How we are achieving this

Development opportunities are achieved through a combination of formal and informal learning. Formal learning includes structured programs such as the UQ Leadership Program, which provides staff with the skills and knowledge needed to lead effectively. Informal learning includes opportunities for staff to learn from each other through mentoring, coaching, and peer support. UQ also encourages staff to take on new challenges and responsibilities, which provides them with valuable experience and learning opportunities. The UQ Learning and Development team works closely with staff to identify their learning needs and provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed.

Related achievements and initiatives

UQ has achieved a number of significant achievements and initiatives in the area of staff development. These include the launch of the UQ Leadership Program, which has provided over 1,000 staff members with leadership training. UQ has also implemented a number of initiatives to support staff development, including the UQ Career Coaching Program, which provides staff with access to professional career coaches. UQ has also established a number of learning and development centers, including the UQ Learning and Development Center, which provides staff with access to a wide range of learning and development resources. UQ has also been recognized for its commitment to staff development, receiving several awards and accolades from industry organizations. These achievements demonstrate UQ's commitment to providing its staff with the best possible learning and development opportunities.

UQ has achieved a number of significant achievements and initiatives in the area of staff development. These include the launch of the UQ Leadership Program, which has provided over 1,000 staff members with leadership training. UQ has also implemented a number of initiatives to support staff development, including the UQ Career Coaching Program, which provides staff with access to professional career coaches. UQ has also established a number of learning and development centers, including the UQ Learning and Development Center, which provides staff with access to a wide range of learning and development resources. UQ has also been recognized for its commitment to staff development, receiving several awards and accolades from industry organizations. These achievements demonstrate UQ's commitment to providing its staff with the best possible learning and development opportunities.

How we are achieving this

Development opportunities are achieved through a combination of formal and informal learning. Formal learning includes structured programs such as the UQ Leadership Program, which provides staff with the skills and knowledge needed to lead effectively. Informal learning includes opportunities for staff to learn from each other through mentoring, coaching, and peer support. UQ also encourages staff to take on new challenges and responsibilities, which provides them with valuable experience and learning opportunities. The UQ Learning and Development team works closely with staff to identify their learning needs and provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed.

u See also
2022 Honour roll pg 10

Career pathways

UQ provides a range of career pathways for its staff, including professional development, leadership training, and career coaching. These pathways are designed to support staff in their current roles and prepare them for future challenges. UQ also offers a variety of learning and development programs, including online courses, workshops, and seminars. Staff can access these programs through the UQ Learning and Development portal.

How we are achieving this

Career pathways are achieved through a combination of formal and informal learning. Formal learning includes structured programs such as the UQ Career Coaching Program, which provides staff with access to professional career coaches. Informal learning includes opportunities for staff to learn from each other through mentoring, coaching, and peer support. UQ also encourages staff to take on new challenges and responsibilities, which provides them with valuable experience and learning opportunities. The UQ Learning and Development team works closely with staff to identify their learning needs and provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed.

Related achievements and initiatives

UQ has achieved a number of significant achievements and initiatives in the area of career pathways. These include the launch of the UQ Career Coaching Program, which has provided over 1,000 staff members with access to professional career coaches. UQ has also implemented a number of initiatives to support career pathways, including the UQ Leadership Program, which provides staff with the skills and knowledge needed to lead effectively. UQ has also established a number of learning and development centers, including the UQ Learning and Development Center, which provides staff with access to a wide range of learning and development resources. UQ has also been recognized for its commitment to career pathways, receiving several awards and accolades from industry organizations. These achievements demonstrate UQ's commitment to providing its staff with the best possible career pathways.

u See also
Research community pg 24

Alumni engagement

UQ has a strong tradition of alumni engagement, with a wide range of programs and initiatives designed to support its graduates. These programs include the UQ Alumni Association, which provides graduates with access to a range of services and resources, including career coaching, networking opportunities, and financial advice. UQ also offers a variety of learning and development programs, including online courses, workshops, and seminars. Staff can access these programs through the UQ Learning and Development portal.

How we are achieving this

Alumni engagement is achieved through a combination of formal and informal learning. Formal learning includes structured programs such as the UQ Alumni Association, which provides graduates with access to a range of services and resources. Informal learning includes opportunities for graduates to learn from each other through mentoring, coaching, and peer support. UQ also encourages graduates to take on new challenges and responsibilities, which provides them with valuable experience and learning opportunities. The UQ Learning and Development team works closely with graduates to identify their learning needs and provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed.

